

MORNING APPEAL.

TUESDAY..... SEPTEMBER 19, 1877

NOTES AND QUERIES.

This Querist confesses to a sadly defective memory even of his own small works; and he is in doubt if there has ever been anything of the likeness of biographical sketches interlarded among these N's and Q's. Possibly this element of literary endeavor might with profit be injected herein; just as in a motley congregation of the aimless, careless and vagabondish, now and then appears a person of the staid, sober, eminently respectable sort, giving the assemblage a tone and a standing which it otherwise would not have. At all events, the coming here, in company, of his Honor, Mr. Justice Field, and Hon. Richard S. Mesick of the Bar, revives some reminiscences which are worth dotting down; and why not note them here as well as elsewhere? This companionship is to be regarded as out of the every day associations and experiences of this mixed populace and its encounters. Back in the Forties, before either of them came to the Pacific, and while Stephen J. was in Paris studying the Civil Code of France, Richard Mesick was a student of law in the office of David Dudley Field. The two, Judge Field and Mr. Mesick had never met until they fell in with another in Marysville in 1850. In that little city, (very busy then, and a most excellent field for two accomplished young lawyers), these two distinguished gentlemen immediately entered upon a first class practice. The cream of the litigation of the times was their share. They were not in partnership but always maintained the warmest friendship for each other. In due time Field's magnificent abilities and rare attainments were recognized, and he was invited by President Lincoln to the place he now holds on the Bench of the Supreme Court. He was transferred, first, from a lucrative practice to the Supreme Bench of California, and thence to the Court of last resort at Washington. All this is schooling, culture, association, experience of the very first class. Also all these years his old friend Mesick has held a front rank in his exacting profession. He, too, has been on the Bench. (It would be a fitting thing if he could be placed upon the Supreme Bench of this State). Look at the long years—more than a quarter of a century—that Mr. Mesick has participated in the choice character of litigation in cases demanding the best kind of legal acumen and knowledge. That's what makes your thorough lawyers and your learned jurists. And what of it? This, my impatient friend, if nothing else: Early Culture; getting the right kind of a start and never deviating from the line which leads to the highest and best. That is the moral of this brief personal allusion. And then as to the old, unbroken, time-mellowed friendship. How charming it is to contemplate even! and how beautiful it must be to enjoy, as these learned brethren of the law enjoy it. An intimate mutual knowledge of nearly thirty years, always respectful, always friendly, always decorous and in the highest degree gentlemanlike. The spectacle is worth contemplating, in the midst of these scenes of a far different and less assuring nature. Here is the value of respect; the worth of true decorum; the fruition of a superior life and aim; the stronger-growing masonry of an acquaintanceship which has never degenerated into the weakness of overfamiliarity or the unfrankness of a narrowing enviousness. The enlarging tendency of the most liberal of the most liberal of professions is seldom more admirably illustrated than in the persons and mutual relationship of these gentlemen. . . . Elsewhere is the report of "an interview." It is there because a very faithful and enthusiastic volunteer aid proposed and executed it. This Inquisitor never did perform an interview. It is not probable he ever will. A horse that gets his paces well set in his adolescence, (the years of his emerging from coltage), is with difficulty taught to mend his gait. "The interview" is a modern innovation. Sometimes we think it an impertinence. (In this instance it is to be tolerated because of its relationship to matters public and political. A Congressman is the servant of the sovereigns. The MORNING APPEAL is at the service of its sovereign—the Constant Reader. Hinc illæ verbera.) There are things worth having and keeping and setting in type, no doubt, even though they be of a newer fashion than anything done or attempted by any of the relics of a fossiliferous journalism. But the trilobites still leave their impress, and it is hard to eradicate it. . . . The time has come when one may, with pertinence, revive that old jingle, of the "Burning moon at bloodshot noon." It is scorching hot at the meridian and thereabout. Is the moon a responsible planet in this relation? Does she take upon herself a borrowed heat as well as a borrowed light, and retail it at second-hand upon her superiors in this way? Do satellites ever thus presume or act? Does the tender whose function it is to follow and serve, ever take upon itself the office of illuminator and heat-dispersing agent? As well might one's valet take upon himself the right to correct the habits and polish the mind of his master. The sun, of course, becomes just as hot as he pleases. The earth is only too humble in his magnificent presence; but for the moon to volunteer, in these dry September days, to add to the already burning character of the heat, is a piece of lunatic impertinence that is not to be borne in patience. Possibly there has been nothing done to excite our ire; possibly the moon is modestly minding its own business; may-be we are drifting into the shadows of incoherency; perhaps this is all moonshine. Quien sabe?

INTERVIEW OF HON. THOMAS WREN, CONGRESSMAN ELECT.

Hon. Thomas Wren, Congressman elect, who succeeds Hon. William Woodburn, from this State to the House of Representatives, at Washington, arrived in our city on Sunday morning last. Our reporter was sent in quest of the Congressional gentleman, to glean for the benefit of his constituency, some of his most salient views respecting the Administration etc. Our representative was received with the greatest degree of suavity at the Ormsby House by Mr. Wren, who expressed his willingness to impart all the information respecting his views and feelings desired for the readers of the MORNING APPEAL. The following are substantially his statements:

Rep. Mr. Wren, what is your feeling in regard to the Southern policy of the President? Mr. Wren. Well, I think that Mr. Hayes is honest in the policy he has adopted. I believe that his course has been adopted with a view to perfect a more harmonious feeling between the two sections of our country; but I doubt whether his policy will terminate successfully in the end. His acts are irretrievable, and it would be suicidal to say the least, to institute a war against the Administration which is using its utmost efforts to create a more thorough and better feeling between the North and the South. No possible good can accrue from a fierce opposition, while the result may not only redound to the detriment of the Republican party, but against the best interests of the nation. I believe it to be the duty of every Republican, in both Houses, to act in harmony with the President.

Rep. Do you think that the general policy of Mr. Hayes will encounter any material obstructions during the next regular session of Congress?

Mr. Wren. I do not. I believe that the President's official conduct has met with the approval of the people at large.

Rep. What do you think the complexion of the next Senate will be?

Mr. Wren. It is difficult to say. The Democrats may organize, if Senator Morton's health precludes his being present; but the general political outlook is a little cloudy. Yet I believe that both Democrats and Republicans will acquiesce in the President's policy, deeming it to be directed toward a better state of feeling than has been experienced for the past decade and a half. The most ultra Democrats throughout the country are endorsing the official acts of Mr. Hayes, and have faith in the conscientiousness of his purpose. I repose the most implicit confidence in his fealty to the Republican party, and regard him a sound Republican.

Rep. Will you sustain the President in his past official acts?

Mr. Wren. I will make no captious opposition to acts that have been carried into effect. His Southern policy overtures cannot be undone.

Rep. What are your views respecting the metallic monetary standard of the country?

Mr. Wren. I am in favor of a double standard; not because I am a representative of a silver producing State, but on general principles; for the public weal. The demonization act was slipped through Congress without the importance of the subject being taken under proper advisement, or with the requisite consideration. The result of the passage of that injudicious act was an injury to the poorer classes while it benefited only a few grasping speculators in Wall street. The question of double or single standard always had received insignificant attention at the hands of Congress until Senator Jones made the vitality of the subject felt.

Rep. The impression has gained ground that you favor the erection of public buildings in the eastern part of the State; is that true?

Mr. Wren. No, Sir, it is not. I believe, and have always expressed my conviction to that effect, that the Capital of the State is the proper place for Federal buildings, and I shall exert my influence to have them erected here if their construction proves necessary.

Rep. Do you think that the importance of this State will warrant the expenditure consequent upon the erection of public buildings?

Mr. Wren. I do. Federal buildings have been erected in States of lesser importance, from every standpoint, and my firm belief is that Nevada should also have them.

Rep. When do you go East, Sir?

Mr. Wren. I leave for Washington on the first proximo, to be there in time for the extra session of Congress, which meets on the 15th of October. After a few further remarks our reporter kindly thanked Mr. Wren and took his departure.

CORRECTION.—In the article on Bodie in our issue of the 16th instant, speaking of the flow of a well at that point, the types were made to say 50,000 gallons per day, when it should read 5,000 gallons. Only an inadvertent addition of one cypher.

DENTIST.—Dr. E. A. Brewster, dentist, has opened rooms for the practice of his profession at the Arlington. See his card and then get a tooth pulled by way of testing his qualities.

Messrs. D. O. Mills, H. M. Yerington and Chief Engineer Anderson are at Bodie.

FROM CANDALARIA.

On yesterday's southern stage Mr. A. A. Smith, a former resident here, returned from Candalaria, where the famous Northern Belle mine is located. From Mr. Smith we elicited the following information: The Northern Belle Company has erected two 20-stamp quartz mills, which are employed during the 24 hours, in crushing 60 tons of ore which are daily extracted from the mine. The rock averages $90 per ton, and runs high in fineness, containing very little base metal. Mr. A. J. Rhodes, a gentleman greatly interested at that point, owns the Victor mine, which is situated about 3,000 feet west of the Northern Belle. The mine is down about 500 feet from the surface, with the most encouraging prospects. The water for the camp is now hauled about seven miles—from Columbus. But Mr. Rhodes contemplates laying pipes shortly to bring the water in from a spring fifteen miles distant. As soon as his project is accomplished he will erect a quartz mill to crush the Victor rock; which will work about $42 to the ton. Mr. Smith is part owner in the Schiller mine, situated between the Victor and the Northern Belle mines. The Schiller has now a tunnel about 680 feet long and sunk a winze to the depth of 120 feet. The ore is called low grade, only working $28 per ton. It cost $4 to mine and $12 to mill the rock, so even this low grade ore will leave a profit of $12, for the owners. Wood is worth $12 per cord. The camp has now a population of 500 people. It contains three stores, five saloons and one hurdy gurdy house, a blessing granted all western mining camps. Mr. Smith expresses great faith in the ultimate productiveness of that section of the country.

APPLICATION FOR A JOB.

The following original letter was received yesterday by a State official from an impecunious individual, applying for a position in his office:

Virg, 14th Sept. 1877.
Carson City,

Sur!
I have been a soldier in both armies during the late war and have done efficient service for both North and South, but my services have not been rewarded. I am out of a job & want sum. I demand you to give me a job in your office at wunse. Altho I ain't much on pen riting, yet I've got a good educashen & am a good first rate clerk. Dont fail to rite for me at wunse. We'll sute each other you Bet.

I am very umbly your frend

We have not learned whether the applicant has been engaged or not. If the accomplished correspondent does not meet with encouragement at the hands of the State officer we may feel inclined to give him an appointment on the APPEAL as soon as our present local dies. A good "educashen" ought to be utilized.

Gen Geo. S. Dodge arrived here on Sunday morning in company with Hon. S. J. Field, Col. Harry Thornton and Hon. Thos. Wren. The General has been an invalid for several months and suffers, yet, quite acutely; but he seems to have lost none of his energy, and as to his managing abilities and promptitude, they are illustrated in the following which we copy from the San Francisco Exchange of Sept 15:

To-day, General Dodge called the Directors of the Eureka Consolidated together, and, in about four minutes, Mr. Secretary Taylor had recorded on his minute book that, by unanimous vote, a dividend of $3 per share, on the capital stock of the company, had been declared, payable September 20th. This is the most comfortable divvy declared in mining circles here in some time. The amount carried over after paying the dividend will be nearly $100,000, a fact which shows that the lawyers didn't eat very deep into the vitals of the Eureka treasury after all.

CARSON BRASS BAND.—The Carson Brass Band gave a petit moonlight concert on the balcony of the Ormsby House Saturday night; among the selections were "Reminiscences of Donizetti" and "Mohawk Minstrels." They acquitted themselves very creditably.

BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.—This Board is now in session looking after the assessment roll of this county. The report upon the conclusion of their labor will be looked forward to with some degree of interest.

The judgement in the case of the Eureka Consolidated Mining Company vs. the Richmond Mining Company was confirmed in the U. S. Circuit Court, in this city yesterday.

U. S. Supreme Judge Field in company with General Dodge and a party of ladies, left for Lake Tahoe per special conveyance, yesterday afternoon.

The mining excitement has this time broken out at Westgate, Churchill county. Several Carsonites have located claims there.

The Mint shipped per Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express last evening, $10,000 in dimes, consigned to the U. S. Treasurer, at Chicago.

Mr. Eugene Beaucharnais Rail shook the dust of Carson from his feet on Sunday evening, and took the cars for San Francisco.

William D. Mann, the gentlemanly ticket agent of the V. & T. R. R. Co., has taken a flying trip to the Sacramento Fair.

STOCKS.—Stocks were up yesterday, and will remain so until they go down again.
